ISP Announces Monumental Policy Changes Which Address Emergency Response Procedures

Press Release Date: November 21, 2008 || Archived May 20, 2009

SPRINGFIELD, IL – November 23 marks the one year anniversary of a tragic car crash that took the lives of sisters Jessica and Kelli Uhl. On that tragic day, Illinois State Police (ISP) Trooper Matt Mitchell's squad car crossed an I-64 median and collided into a car occupied by the two Collins

Command officers within the ISP were directed to discuss the importance of exercising due care when responding to calls for service with their subordinates. Additionally, during the past year, the ISP convened an internal committee, and consulted with the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration and the Police Executive Research Forum to review various law enforcement policies

As a result of the review, the ISP will institute monumental policy changes and enhancements on January 1, 2009. The following policy changes are being implemented in an effort to lessen the likelihood of a similar tragedy:

- Implementation of a comprehensive response driving policy. The policy will institute a four-tier response code system for officers responding t a departments have set such stringent requirements.

- Implementation of a cellular hands-free requirement. The use of cellular phone while driving a department-owned vehicle will only be permitted when the device is used with a hands-free component. Also, officers will not be permitted to use a mobile data computer or cellular equipment for voice or data communications while on an emergency response call.

- Implementation of a four-tier response system based on situation–officers must have supervisor authority to exceed speed limit by more than 20 mph
- Cell phone use must be hands-free
- No MDC or cell phone use while on emergency response

TROOPER GETS PROBATION

BELLEVILLE • Illinois State Trooper Matt Mitchell made a plea deal Friday in which he admitted criminal responsibility but avoided prison for a high-speed traffic crash that killed two teenage sisters as he responded to a call.

Mitchell stood before a judge and said he will "forever regret" losing control of his patrol car and causing a fiery crash on Interstate 64, near the Scott Air Force base exit, that killed the sisters and injured others, including himself.

In exchange for the guilty plea on two counts each of reckless homicide and aggravated reckless driving, Judge Jan Fiss put Mitchell

TROOPER NOW SAYS HE DIDN'T CAUSE FATAL CRASH

BELLEVILLE • Illinois Trooper Matt Mitchell admitted Friday that he was criminally responsible for an on-duty crash that killed two sisters, and apologized for his recklessness. On Monday, he tried to take it all back.

"I did not plead guilty because I felt that I did it," Mitchell said in an Illinois Court of Claims hearing here. "I did not think I could get a fair trial. I did what I had to do."

The about-face came three days after Mitchell, 31, pleaded guilty on two counts each of reckless homicide and aggravated reckless driving, and was sentenced to 30 months on probation. At the time, he said he would "forever regret" what happened.

But things changed under heated questioning Monday morning by lawyer Tom Keefe, who is seeking $24 million in wrongful-death damages for the family of victims Jessica Uhl, 18, and Kelli Uhl, 13. Mitchell refused to admit he caused the collision.

Keefe repeatedly asked Mitchell whether he had lied when he admitted wrongdoing in the criminal case.

"I guess I did," Mitchell responded.

EX-ILLINOIS TROOPER WHO KILLED SISTERS SEEKS WORKERS' COMP

On the day after Thanksgiving 2007, an Illinois state trooper hit and killed two sisters while he was driving 126 mph, sending e-mail and talking to his girlfriend on his cellphone. Now he wants the state to pay him for the serious leg injuries he suffered in the crash, the Belleville News-Democrat reports.

Now-former trooper Matt Mitchell filed a workers' compensation claim last week, despite having pleaded guilty to reckless homicide and reckless driving and being sentenced to 30 months of probation. During the two years before his plea and resigning from the Illinois State Police, he collected his annual $68,000-a-year salary while suspended.

Police said Mitchell was speeding on I-64 near O'Fallon while responding to an accident even though help was at the scene already. His cruiser crossed the median and hit a car head on, killing the sisters and injuring two friends.

Although Mitchell was negligent, he could be compensated under state law because the accident happened while he was doing his job, lawyers say.

UHL SISTERS' MOTHER GETS UHL LAW SIGNED

The bill, Senate Bill 1147, prohibits a person who is injured or killed at work from collecting workers' compensation benefits if the individual's injury, disablement, or death occurs while he or she was committing a forcible felony, an aggravated DUI, or reckless homicide that resulted in the death or injury of another person and the individual is convicted of the offense. Senate Bill 1147 passed both chambers unanimously and was signed into law by Governor Quinn in August.

"This was a very complicated measure that went through a thorough vetting process in the Senate," Haine said. "The bill was amended to address concerns in the Senate Executive Committee and ensures that reckless, criminal behavior is not rewarded in our workers' compensation system."

EX-ILLINOIS TROOPER LOSES BID TO GET BACK DRIVING PRIVILEGES

BELLEVILLE • A former Illinois State Police trooper whose 2007 high-speed crash killed two sisters has lost his latest bid to get his driving privileges back.

The Belleville News-Democrat reports that an Illinois Secretary of State hearing officer denied Matt Mitchell's request to have his driver's license reinstated. He now has a little more than a month to appeal to a court.

Mitchell's license was revoked after he pleaded guilty to reckless homicide charges. He was driving more than 120 mph and using his cellphone on Interstate 64 in southwestern Illinois when his cruiser crossed the median, killing Jessica and Kelli

JESSE WHITE BLOCKING LICENSE FOR EX-TROOPER

Illinois Secretary of State Jesse White's office says he has been personally blocking attempts by a former Illinois state trooper to get his driver's license back.

The former trooper, Matt Mitchell, lost his driving privileges over a 2007 crash in which he killed two sisters. Mitchell was driving more than 120 mph at the time and using his cellphone and computer.

On Tuesday, spokesman Dave Druker told the Belleville News Democrat it was Jesse White himself. Druker says White feels the former trooper has not presented a convincing case.
